de rien not at all

bon voyage have a good journey

bonne route have a good journey (to people going in a car)

You work in the SNCF ticket office. Your teacher buys a ticket.

Describe to your teacher how to get to either the nearest motorway or the nearest railway station.

Motorways

Motorways are good in France, but watch out for the tolls: all motorways have them.

Railway (SNCF)

French railways are the envy of the world ... well, certainly of Britain. People who have travelled by the Eurostar from London to Paris or Brussels will be familiar the train's rapid glide the other side of the Channel and the slow progress from London to the coast.

The TGV (le Train à Grande Vitesse, i.e. intercity or express) is guick and comfortable. The SNCF runs the railways in France (Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer).

In Paris

In or around Paris you might take a local train, or the underground, le métro, or the faster regional metro, le RER (Réseau Express Régional).

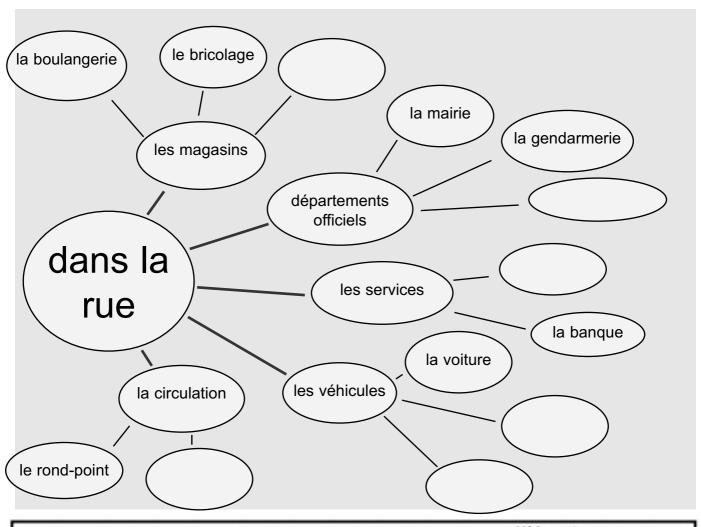

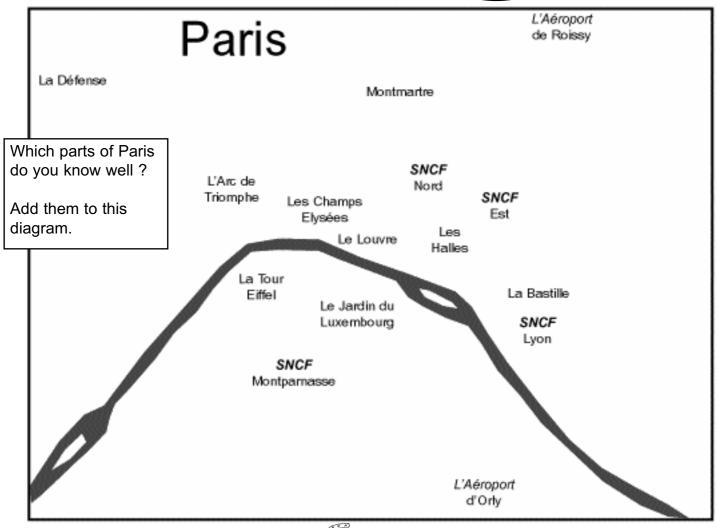

Buy a ticket from Calais to Bordeaux.

Ask

- (a) how much it is
- (b) whether you need to change en route
- (c) when it leaves
- (d) from which platform
- (e) when it reaches Bordeaux.

Translate the English parts into French::

Passenger A ticket for Nantes, please.

SNCF Oui, un aller simple ou aller-retour?

Passenger Single, please.

SNCF Bien sûr, Monsieur. C'est 42,60 euros svp.

Passenger There you are.

SNCF Merci.

Passenger What time is the next train for Nantes?

SNCF 11h45.

Passenger From which platform is the train for Nantes leaving?

SNCF Nantes? Euh ... Du quai sept.

Passenger Thank you, goodbye.

Excusez-moi,
Monsieur, où est la
Gare du Nord?

Le Métro

A word of caution: though a single-fare ticket is valid for an entire continuous trip — including connections — be sure to keep your ticket until you leave the system at your destination; being caught without it means an instant fine, payable in cash on the spot (unless you wish to acquaint yourself with the French judicial system).

While Paris has a lower incidence of violent crime than most major cities, it is wise to keep your wits about you (particularly in the crowded venue of a métro station) and guard against pick-pockets, whose scams and diversions can be particularly creative at times.

Should you happen to see everyone leaving a packed métro station following an announcement in French on the public address system, the chances are you are witnessing one of their periodic strikes (grèves).

Still, Paris is a fine city to walk around.

Which Métro line (Line 1,2,3,4, etc) has the stops: Louvre, Champs-Elysées, Chatelet, Bastille?

On which line will you find the stops: Invalides, Montparnasse, Champs-Elysées?

You approach the information desk at Le Gare du Nord. Ask

- (a) how to get to Gare Montparnasse by the Métro
- (b) how to get to La Défense

Later you are at Les Halles (close to the river). Ask how to get to the Eiffel Tower.

Vous prenez la ligne trois en direction du Pont de Levallois, puis vous changez à St Lazare.

un taxi take a taxi
le train pour Marseille a train for Marseille l'avion pour Londres a plane for London le métro take the metro la ligne quatorze line 14
le vélo

Your teacher is lost and has ended up at Luxembourg, south of the river. Explain how to get to:

- (a) Le Gare du Nord
- (b) Champs-Elysées
- (c) Gare Montparnasse
